A strong testimony to the capacity for resilience and surpassing oneself.

Victim of a serious stroke in the foothills of the Indian Himalayas when she was 25, Orianne had to give up high altitude forever.

But with incredible determination, she was able to thwart medical prognoses a few years later by successfully climbing Lhotse (8516 m) in the Himalayas. The only woman in her group, she embarked on a vertiginous journey in all aspects: physical, emotional, spiritual. On May 23, 2019, after a chaotic ascent, she found herself at the top of Lhotse contemplating Everest in front of her.

In her conferences, Orianne recounts this hymn to life, this courage to be oneself despite sometimes painful events. It is a real initiatory journey through which Orianne promotes values such as letting go, confidence, surpassing oneself, learning one's limits, determination, faith in one's abilities and in one's dreams.

A real source of inspiration to offer your employees to experience a suspended moment, together!
