within the Institut de

The André and Liliane Bettencourt Auditorium

Used weekly by the Academies of the Institut de France, The Auditorium and its majestic hall are reserved exclusively for you. They will give full weight and power to your major events.

The stone floor and walls of the stage give the impression of being in a Greek amphitheatre in this bare performance space. This sense of sacredness is enhanced by the overhead lighting. It illuminates the frame and the back wall of the stage. On the audience side, the walls and ceiling are covered with wooden panels forming caissons, like those found in official 19th-century lounges.

With its 350 seats, its stage, its dressing rooms, its translation booths and its state-of-the-art stage and audiovisual equipment, the auditorium is the perfect setting for high-end Parisian events.

Grande Halle

A converted 19th century industrial hall, during the French Revolution, this part of the site was loaned to the neighbouring Monnaie de Paris (Paris Mint). A minting workshop was built here. When, at the turn of the 2000s, the five academies sought to invest in bespoke premises for their conferences, the State returned the property to them.

Marc Barani's project revived the old hall, adding a layer of architectural expression to the solemnity commanded by the place and its new functionality. The paved courtyard adjacent to the Grande Halle gives the site an incredible style, the hallmark of the Parisian world of artisan workshops and industries tucked away from view and nurturing the love of carefully honed craftsmanship.
